Oaly when everybody's hand is raised against his neighbor could there be any occasion for Germany joining Turkey. That the sultan, in his present desperate position, among other visionary schemes, may indulge in the idea of a German-Russian war and a German-Turkish league is quite credible, but there is a long way between the actual state of things and such a contingency. The sultan has asked for some members of the Prussian civil service to assist in reforming the Turkish administration, and the request has been granted. Beyond displaying a belief in the continued existence of Turkey, the action of the Berlin government in this matter has no political significance.

croit. It may be added that, to judge from the average result, the instruction given in Sunday-schools must have been of a very desultory and icadequate kind. It has been lately asked what proportion of those now under Sauday instructions will grow up into regular attendants at church. But we may first ask what propertion has so grown up during the century these schools have been in operation, and moreover, what has been during that period the average standard of religious knowledge and practice among the classes who have been sulj-oted in childhood to this method of training. The answer to both questions, we fear, would prove very far indeed from satisfactory. The "epochal character" of the present celebration may perhaps be sufficiently justified by reference to "the blessings vouchsafed to Sauday schools during the past hundred years," recorded in the resolution in wed the other day by the archbishop of Cantribury at the Guildhall, but there is at least equal need to justify it by seezing the opportunity as a starting point for interestical.
